Habitat creation at Northstowe:

Northstowe has ambitious plans to ensure the development of Northstowe Town benefits plants, animals and people – all creatures great and small. A major part of the net gain plan will be delivered a short distance away at Smithy Fen where hectares of land are being managed for farmland birds.

The most recognisable part of the on-site strategy is the new waterparks and associated planting which attract a variety of birds, insects and aquatic life to the town.

Three large ponds dominate the park with fluctuating water tables and permanent water expected to be present throughout the year. Graded pond edges are shaped to create access for recreation as well as providing a rich ecological environment of wetland, riverside and aquatic vegetation.

The town's sustainable drainage system is used to manage surface water through a series of ponds, open swales, alongside roads and within green spaces, protecting the town from major flood events – well above the normal development standard. These ponds and swales run along greenways and form another part of the open space network that provides fantastic leisure routes and trails for all to enjoy
